

We believe that caring families are the most important building blocks for healthy communities & that strong communities build successful societies.

Let's work together

Since our inception, Future Families has demonstrated the benefits of a proven model that helps strengthen families and provides effective support to orphans and vulnerable children.

Future Families works towards its goals by:

1

Empowering OVC and their families.

2

Improving the quality of services to OVC and their families by training and motivating a growing FF work force.

3

Strengthening communities to respond better to OVC and their families.

Future Families welcomes partners to support our work of empowering families to create their own future. Please join us to empower our children and improve the collective future of South Africa.

Our team of dedicated, well-trained staff ensures that the quality of life for orphans and vulnerable children in communities is improved and the capacity of communities to address the needs of these children and build a resilient safety net for them is enhanced.

Future Families already partners with local and international organisations to accomplish its mission.

Our care model is supported by the South African Department of Social Development, the US Agency for International Development (USAID), the US President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR) and the Ford Motor Company in Waltloo, Pretoria.

For the sake of South Africa's children and the collective future of the country.

Helping families and communities build and sustain long-lasting relationships.

Be more socially aware and responsible

In a country where thousands of people – especially orphans and vulnerable children and their families – depend on the assistance of institutions, companies, communities and individuals, Future Families welcomes volunteers and partners.

Partners with us

Future Families invites partners to expand our work and serve more orphans and vulnerable children and families in need. This is how you can partner with us:

Universities and students can benefit from practical work in occupational and speech therapy, physiotherapy and psychotherapy.

Teachers can refer students and request support and programming in schools.

Church congregations can share information, refer children and families, and assist in obtaining donations.

Anyone can sponsor community care workers to support their work, training and stipends.

Volunteer work, partnership efforts and financial or material contributions are all important and needed.

Become a volunteer

There are many ways in which you can assist Future Families. You do not need specific skills, interests or resources, and you can be young or old. Future Families connects volunteers with a variety of opportunities to interact with the community, build relationships and skills and help others understand the importance of their contributions.

Volunteers are the links to communities and are as vital as financial donations: you can make a big difference to the lives of the orphans, vulnerable children and families we care for. Future Families works with educators, students and professionals who volunteer their valuable time to enhance our programmes through:

Supporting life skills activities during school holidays

Supervising after-school homework classes two afternoons per week at local schools

Providing ongoing support to orphans and vulnerable children who are in need of specialised attention such as speech therapy or psychotherapy.

Through the generosity of a variety of funding sources, including individual donors, corporations, governmental entities and foundations, Future Families has had the resources to carry out our mission successfully.

With growing support, even more orphans and vulnerable children, families and communities can be reached to build and sustain longstanding relationships, which are key to successful outcomes.

Investing in Future Families helps build a healthier country and ensure orphans and children receive the care and support they deserve.

- Financial and material contributions are welcome and make a huge difference in the lives of orphans and vulnerable children and their families.
- Businesses can also make Future Families a corporate social responsibility or awareness partner, with our personnel providing your employees with HIV and AIDS prevention training, counselling and testing, and involving your employees in various ways.

Building stronger communities with healthy and happy families.
